From "The Friend."

ELIZABETH HOOTON.

"Elizabeth Hooton was born in Nottingham, England, about the year 1600; she was the wife of Samuel Hooton, who occupied a respectable position in society.

"In 1647, she formed one of a company of serious persons who occasionally met together; and at this date, George Fox mentions her as being a 'very tender woman;' the meetings and discourses she had with him appear to have been the means of convincing her of the spiritual views of Friends.

"Sewel says, that in 1650, 'from a true experience of the Lord's work in man, she felt herself moved publicly to preach the way of salvation to others.'

"Elizabeth Hooton had not long followed her Lord in this high vocation, before her sincerity and faithfulness were tested by persecution.

"In 1651, she was imprisoned at Derby for reproving a priest; in the following year, while travelling in Yorkshire, she was apprehended at Rotherham for addressing the congregation at the close of public worship, and taken to York Castle, where, with her friend Mary Fisher (who, our historian tells us, with Anne Austin, was the first who landed on the American continent to promulgate the doctrines of Friends), she was confined for sixteen months. In 1654, whilst on a gospel mission in Lincolnshire, she was imprisoned for five months. In the following year, she suffered three months' imprisonment in the same country, 'for exhorting the people to repentance.' In the course of her early travels in the work of the ministry, she was also subjected to other kinds of suffering.

"Deeply sensible, as were the early Friends of the spirituality and importance of the views which they had embraced, and of their entire accordance with the doctrines and precepts of Christ, they longed for their universal reception; and, under the influence of the Holy Spirit, their hearts were warmed in gospel love to their fellow men everywhere. felt the efficacy of the free teaching of Christ, they were drawn to invite others to the same blessed experience, and "Come, taste and see that the Lord is good,' was the emphatic language of their souls.

"The extreme cruelties to which Friends in New England had been exposed, excited deep sympathy among their fellow members at home; in this feeling, Elizabeth Hooton largely participated, and, though conscious that suffering was almost sure to await her, she left her home in 1661, under an apprehension of a religious call to this persecuting province. This transatlantic visit, and another which quickly followed it, occupied her for several years.

"It was during this visit in 1661, that she, with ten other Friends, who, having been liberated from the Boston prison, felt themselves called upon to preach to the inhabitants those truths for which they had suffered, and for which they were driven forth into the wilderness, where they were exposed to many dangers. Joane Brocksoppe, traveled until they arrived at Rhode Island. From this colony they went on a visit to the West Indies; but believing that it was required of them to revisit New England, and testify against the spirit of persecution, they soon after returned to Boston. The authorities, however, being bent on their expulsion, caused them to be arrested and conveyed back to the ship in which they came. In this they returned to Virginia, and soon after to their native land.

"Elizabeth Hooton had not been long at home, before the duty of returning to New England, more particularly to Massachusetts, revived with increased weight and clearness. In making a third visit to this persecuting colony she deemed it advisable, in order to prevent banishment, to obtain, if possible, a license from the king to settle in any of the colonies of Britain, and to buy a house for herself to live in, Friends to meet in, and ground to bury their dead in. This license was readily granted by the king. The rulers, who had hitherto expelled every English Quaker preacher that had ventured within their limits, resolved that she should not settle amongst them; and in contempt of the royal order, peremptorily refused to recognize her right to purchase land in the territory. After repeated but ineffectual solicitations to the authorities at Boston on this subject, she proceeded on her gospel mission to the northern parts of Massachusetts, in the course of which she was subjected to much cruel suffering.

"At Dover, during very cold weather, she was placed in the stocks, and imprisoned for four days. Passing through Cambridge on her return, she felt called to exhort the inhabitants to repentance, an act of dedication for which she suffered still greater severities. At the instance of the magistracy, she was arrested, and for two days and two nights confined in a noisome dungeon, without food, and without anything to lie down on or even sit upon. It may be difficult to estimate the actual amount of physical hardship endured by one under such painful circumstances, but it will be readily imagined, that with the damp floor of a pestilential dungeon as the only resting place of an aged female for forty-eight hours, in cold weather and without sustenance, her sufferings must have been exceedingly great. Whilst in this distressed condition, a Friend, touched with sympathy for her, brought her a little milk; but for this act of Christian kindness, the authorities of Cambridge arbitrarily fined him five pounds, and committed him to prison. On the third day of her confinement to the prison, she was brought before the court, and sentenced to be whipped through three towns and expelled the colony. This terrible cruelty was inflicted with great rigor. Miserably torn and bruised by these severities, the aged sufferer was now placed on horseback and carried into the wilderness, where she was left towards night in a defenceless condition to the inclemencies of winter. She was remarkably cared for by her Divine Master, and through dismal deserts, and deep waters, she was favored at length to reach the town of Rehoboth, from whence she proceeded to her friends on Rhode Island, praising and magnifying Him who had so signally supported her under these grievous cruelties, and who had counted her worthy to suffer for his great Name.

"Notwithstanding the cruelties to which she had thus been repeatedly exposed for entering Massachusetts, when she believed it was required of her by her Divine Master, she did not hesitate again to visit that colony. Here she was again committed to prison; and again suffered at the whipping-post in Boston; and in adjacent towns was whipped through the streets, and carried into the wilderness. This persecuted minister of Christ was soon again impressed with the belief that it was required of her to return to Boston, in which she was faithful to the divine call. This act of dedication, however, met with the same cruel treatment, the threat being added, that 'if she ever came thither again, they would put her to death, or brand her on the shoulder.'

"Again in 1665, at the time of *Endicott's death, she visited Boston, and attending his funeral, she was imprisoned, no doubt for addressing the company and exhorting them against persecution, and calling their attention to the judgment of the Most High upon the deceased, as evinced in the miserable condition in which he died. Twice afterwards was she imprisoned in Boston; after her release her horse was taken from her, and she was obliged to travel seventy miles on foot, in order to get to Rhode Island.

"Through all her trials and afflictions in this country, she was greatly comforted with the presence of her Saviour, in the precious enjoyment of which, she felt willing to endure much for His sake, and for that of her fellow creatures. 'Yea,' she observed, 'the love that I bear to the souls of men, makes me will-

"As a gospel minister she appears to have stood high in the estimation of her friends; and although far advanced in age, when George Fox visited the West India Islands and America, in 1671, she was among those who accompanied him in this capacity. They proceeded first to Barbadoes; and after laboring there in word and doctrine, they sailed for Jamaica; about a week after they landed on this island, she was suddenly taken ill, and on the following day she died, being then about seventy years of age, having been a minister about twenty-one years. In allusion to her death, George Fox makes this brief remark: 'She departed in peace, like a lamb; bearing testimony to truth at her departure.'"

"A TESTIMONY of Friends in Pennsylvania concerning their deceased friend and Governor, William Penn:

"We find ourselves under obgation and concern, both in duty and affection, to give this mark of our love and the honorable regard we bear to the memory of our late worthy Governor and well beloved friend, Wm. Penn, though it may not be our part to attempt so ample and general a testimony as seems justly called for. By his early convincement of the blessed truth, his noble resignation thereunto, his steadfastness therein, and great services to the church of Christ, as well by incessant labor in word and doctrine (made more extensive by the many excellent writings he hath published), as his valiant sufferings for purity of worship, and the testimony he had received, which, to him, might be the greater trial and conflict, his birth and station in the world placing him more in the notice of those of high rank amongst men than was commonly the lot of many others of our worthy elders. Neither can it, we presume, be forgotten how, when it pleased the Lord to give some ease to his people, this, our dear friend, employed the interest he then had, with success, and devoted his time and purse to serve not only his friends, in their religious liberties, but them and others distressed, or any wanting favor, even to the neglect of his own just interest. But these memorials we leave to be made by those of our worthy elders in Great Britain, who have more instances and greater knowledge of those his trials, services, and labors, than many of us can be presumed to be so fully acquainted with.

"Yet it becomes us particularly to say that, as he was our Governor, he merited from us love and true honor; and we cannot but have the same regard to his memory, when we consider the blessings and ease we have enjoyed under his government, and are rightly sensible of his care, affection, and regard, always shown with anxious concern for the safety and prosperity of the people, who, many of them, re moved from comfortable livings to be adventurers with him, not so much with views of better acquisitions or greater riches, but with the laudable prospect of a retired quiet habitation for themselves and posterity, and the promotion of truth and virtue in the earth.

"And as his love was great, and endeavors constant for the happiness of his friends, countrymen, and fellow subjects, so was his great tenderness, justice, and love towards the Indians, from first to last, always conspicuous and remarkable. Here we cannot but gratefully and humbly acknowledge to the gracious God of all our mercies, the wonderful preservation of this colony from such injuries and barbarous depredations as have befallen most others; and add, that we believe the same love wherewith the Lord had so fully and effectually prevailed on the heart of this our worthy friend, was the chief and durable motive of his affection and kind behavior towards those people; and was the cause, as he was made a means, of this our peace and preservation; so that his name remains precious even amongst the heathens.

"More might be truly said of him, as he was the Proprietary and Governor of this province, and we now find it our duty (incited thereto by the love of our Heavenly Father in our souls), to add a few lines concerning him, as he was our worthy Elder, friend, and brother in the blessed truth; many of us having been often comforted, edified, and solaced with him in the enjoyment thereof. As was his testimony, so was his conversation, edifying and lovely, administering grace and knowledge. His behavior was sweet and engaging, and his condescension great; even to the weakest and meanest, affable and of easy access; tender of every person and thing that had simplicity of truth or honesty for a foundation.

"It was our comfort to understand that, after all his various troubles, trials, and afflictions, when in an advanced age, infirmity of body, and a distemper which affected his memory in most other things which befel him, yet the love of God remained with him, and his sense thereof was frequently strong and evident, and, we doubt not, the blessing of the Almighty was his Omega. So that we have assured hope, those afflictions being put off with his mortal body, immortality is given him by our Lord Jesus, and as he faithfully bore the cross, the crown (which was his hope and long since in his eye) is his possession, and his soul received into that bliss prepared and appointed for the righteous.

A SERMON FROM A PAIR OF BOOTS.

Forty years ago there lived in Berlin a shoemaker, who had a habit of speaking harshly of all his neighbors who did not feel exactly as he did about religion. The old pastor of the parish in which the shoemaker lived, heard of this, and felt that he must give him a lesson. He did it in this way. He sent for the shoemaker one morning, and when he came he said to him, "Master, take my measure for a pair of boots."

"With pleasure, your reverence," answered the shoemaker. "Please to take off your boots." The clergyman did so, and the shoemaker measured his foot from the toe to the heel, and over the instep, and noted all down in his pocket-book, and then prepared to leave the room.

But as he was putting up the measure, the pastor said to him, "Master, my son also requires a pair of boots."

"I will make them with pleasure, your reverence. Can I take the young gentleman's measure?"

"It is not necessary," said the pastor. "The lad is fourteen, but you can make my boots and his from the same last."

"Your reverence, that will never do," said the shoemaker, with a smile of surprise.

"I tell you, master, to make my boots and my son's on the same last."

"No, your reverence, I cannot do it."

"It must be—on the same last."

"But, your reverence, it is not possible, if the boots are to fit," said the shoemaker, thinking to himself that the old pastor's wits were leaving him.

"Ah, then, Master Shoemaker," said the clergyman, "every pair of boots must be made on their own last, if they are to fit; and yet you think that God is to form all Christians exactly according to your own last—of the same measure and growth in religion as yourself. That will not do either."

The shoemaker was abashed.

Then he said, "I thank your reverence for this sermon, and I will try to remember it, and so judge my neighbors less harshly for the future."—Selected.

THE QUAKER OF THE OLDEN TIME.

BY J. G. WHITTIER.

The Quaker of the olden time!
  How calm and firm and true,
Unspotted by its wrong and crime,
  He walked the dark earth through.
The lust of power, the love of gain,
  The thousand lures of sin
Around him, had no power to stain
  The purity within.

With that deep insight which detects
  All great things in the small,
And knows how each man's life affects
  The spiritual life of all,
He walked by faith and not by sight,
  By love and not by law;
The presence of the wrong or right
  He rather felt than saw.

He felt that wrong with wrong partakes,
  That nothing stands alone,
That whoso gives the motive makes
  His brother's sin his own.

And pausing not for doubtful choice
Of evils great or small,
He listened to that inward voice
Which called away from all.

O Spirit of that early day,
So pure and strong and true,
Be with us in the narrow way
Our faithful fathers knew.
Give strength the evil to forsake,
The cross of Truth to bear,
And love and reverent fear to make
Our daily lives a prayer!

COURTEOUSNESS.

There are some virtues, the outward expression of which can, with tolerable correctness, be counterfeited by those who do not possess them; and a feeling of suspicion and distrust is often naturally awakened as to the genuineness of the principle, even when there is an external manifestation of it Kindness and benevolence find their natural expression not only in generous deeds and self-sacrificing efforts, but in lesser acts of kindness; in looks, tones, and gestures of civility, deference and courteousness, which are so winning and pleasing that it is no wonder that they are frequently counterfeited. There are not wanting those who, actuated by selfish motives, and seeing the admiration and affection yielded to a kind and courteous bearing, endeavor to produce the fruit without cultivating the root. Such efforts are often attended with a certain degree of success, until some sacrifice is required, when the selfish nature that has been hidden under a false exterior is brought to light, and the politeness is found to be artificial and soulless. Such discoveries lead many excellent persons to undervalue and depreciate courteousness. We often hear the remark, "It is no matter about the manners so long as the heart is right;" and we not unfrequently see the truly generous man repressing the natural outflow of his emotions, and performing benevolent actions in the most ungracious manner. Such persons make a serious mistake; one which, if persisted in, will lessen the good they can impart, and the happiness they can receive.

The pleasure conferred on others by kind and courteous manners is not measured by the value of the benefit itself, but by the grateful sensation of being the object of kindness and cordialty. The civility in itself may, bring no palpable advantage, may require no material sacrifice, may involven either loss nor trouble, and may be only respectful attention or a kindly inquiry, or an effort to relieve embarrassment, yet it may conduce more to the happiness of him who receives it, than the most expensive charity. The money of the generous will relieve distress and incite gratitude, but he who brings the grasp of cordiality, the smile of sympathy, the delicate and kindly attention, throws sunshine into the heart that no material benefit can convey. Though few have it in their power to give money largely, all can bestow courtesy without reserve, and it will increase by its liberal diffusion.

Courteous manners not only convey happiness in large measure to the recipients, but also to their possessor. Every one who does a gracious action feels its reward immediately in a conscious satisfaction that can never follow a grum, haughty, or repellent mood. Children trained to be polite and gentle are always happier than if suffered to disregard the feelings of their companions. The pleasure that follows the exercise of power is always heightened when directed into beneficent channels, and this power, so often thought to be confined to the rich, is in truth possessed by every one of us. It is also eminently expansive in its nature. Justice and generosity can at most be exercised only on a limited scale; even patriotism concerns a single nation, but the virtue of civility knows no exceptions. Every one we meet, from the dearest friend to the utter stranger, may claim some tribute at our hands. Good will may be shown in countless ways, and carries with it a cheerfulness and animation that more than compensate for the effort it may cost.

Let no one then despise a courteous bearing, or neglect the lesser amenities of life. They will render the disposition itself more lovely, for every emotion is strengthened by natural expression, and weakened by repression. While ever shunning the false coin of a cold etiquette, that springs from no gentle emotion, let us cherish the natural expression of a kind spirit, and thus lighten the burdens of the sorrowful, and add to the cup of joy that all may taste.—Public Ledger.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF SNEEZING.

A sneeze always indicates that there is something wrong. It does not occur in health, unless some foreign agent irritates the membranes of the nasal passages, upon which the nervous filaments are distributed. In case of cold, or what is termed influenza, these are unduly excitable, and hence the repeated sneezings which then occur. The nose receives three sets of nerves: the nerves of smell, those of feeling, and those of motion. The former communicate to the brain the odorous properties of substances with which they come in contact, in a diffused or concentrated state; the second communicate the impressions of touch; the third move the muscles of the nose, but the power of these muscles is very limited. When a sneeze occurs, all these faculties are excited in a high degree. A grain of snuff excites the olfactory nerves, which despatch to the brain the intelligence that "Snuff has attacked the nostril!" The brain instantly sends a mandate through the motor nerves to the muscles, saying, "Cast it out!" and the result is unmistakable. So offensive is the enemy besieging the nostril held to be, that the nose is not left to its own defence. It were too feeble to accomplish this. An allied army of muscles join in the rescue; nearly one-half the body arouses against the intruder; from the muscles of the lips to those of the abdomen, all unite in the effort for the expulsion of the grain of snuff. Let us consider what occurs in this instantaneous operation. The lungs become fully inflated, the abdominal organs are pressed downwards, and the veil of the palate falls down to form a barrier to the escape of air through the mouth; and now all the muscles, which have relaxed for the purpose, contract simultaneously, and force the compressed air from the lungs in a torrent out through the nasal passages, with the benevolent determination to sweep away the particle of snuff which has been causing irritation therein. Such, then, is the complicated action of a sneeze; and if the first effort does not succeed, then follows a second, a third, and a fourth; and not until victory is achieved, do the army of defenders dissolve their compact, and settle down in the enjoyment of peace and quietude.—Journal of Medical Reform.

A MURDEROUS SEA FLOWER.

One of the exquisite wonders of the sea, says the Scientific American, is called the opelet, and is about as large as the German aster, looking, indeed, very much like one. Imagine a very large double aster with ever so many long petals of a light green, glossy as satin, and each one tipped with a rose color. These lovely petals do not lie quietly in their places like those of the aster in your garden, but wave about in the water, while the opelet generally clings to a rock. How innocent and lovely it looks on its rocky bed! Who would suspect that it could eat anything grosser than dew or sunshine? But those beautiful waving arms, as you call them, have another use besides looking pretty. They have to provide food for a large open mouth which is hidden deep among them, so well hidden that one can scarcely find it. Well do they perform their duty, for the instant that a foolish little fishlet touches one of the rosy lips he is struck with poison as fatal to him as lightning. He immediately becomes numb, and in a moment stops struggling, and then the other beautiful arms wrap around him, and he is drawn into the huge, greedy mouth, and is seen no more. Then the lovely arms unclose and wave again in the water, looking as innocent and harmless as though they had never touched a fish.

Opinion resembles faith so much, that the eye had need to be opened to discern the difference: yet a great one there is. Many have strong opinions concerning the work of religion; some have looked upon it as instantaneous, some otherwise. I confess, with respect to that instantaneous work, I have not so learned Christ. Far be it from me to judge another man's servant, but I have not so learned Christ, as to know that to be an instantaneous, but a gradual work. Some think there is a sudden death to sin, and a new birth to righteousness in a moment. I have not traced the conduct of people professing the Christian religion, with an uncharitable eye; but I have often observed that instantaneous work to be of a short-lived continuance; have seen some recur back again to their sins, and their latter end has been worse than the beginning. When God said, Let there be light, there was light, a succession of days and nights. The beauties of creation were gradually brought forth, till man was made in God's image.

I have not been destitute of some degree of religious experience; the praise I dedicate to God, the fruits to your service. Religion has worn this aspect with me; it has been a gradual work, a gradual advancement from faith to faith; but when people are enriched with unfelt truths, they call a strong persuasion of mind, faith; when it is only opinion.—S. Fothergill.

Oh, thus keeping silence before the Lord, and thus drawing near to him in a true silent frame of spirit, to hear first what the Lord speaks to us, before we speak to others, whether it be of judgment or mercy, is the way for renewing our strength, and to be his ministers to speak to others only what he first speaks to us. Oh that the people truly minded this! Oh that they would seriously consider thereof, then would they not run after or follow such as their ministers, priests or prophets, who run and God never sent them; who say, Thus saith the Lord, when God hath not spoken to them, and who shall not profit the people at all.—George Whitehead.

It is not the assent of the life and of the tongue to the glorious truths of the gospel; but a surrender of the will and affections, a renovation of heart, and conformity to the Divine image, which alone gain us admission into the New Jerusalem, the City of God.—S. Fothergill.
